

Professor Elizabeth Bomberg, Professor of Politics (2016-2020)

While originally from the United States (PhD in Political Science, University of California) Professor Bomberg has worked at Edinburgh University since 2000. She has served as Head of Politics and International Relations and as Director of Undergraduate Teaching for the School of Social and Political Science. Bomberg is also Deputy Director of one of the University's Global Academies and creator of our MSc in Global Environment, Politics and Society. These posts involve considerable collaboration with practitioners. Her research and teaching interests lie in the area of environmental politics and policy, community energy and transatlantic relations. She is keenly interested in projects designed to link teaching and research excellence, as well as initiatives which encourage and enable bright students from disadvantaged backgrounds to consider University study.
