ACES: Access to Creative Education in Scotland

ACES is a project created for young people from S4 to S6 who attend local authority schools in Scotland.

ACES supports students in all aspects of applying to an art and design based degree course. It is managed and delivered by:

- Duncan of Jordanstone College of Art and Design
- Edinburgh College of Art
- Glasgow School of Art
- Grays School of Art

Who can get involved?

ACES provides encouragement and advice for students who are often under-represented in universities. You may attend a priority school, and/or be first in your family to go to university; but more importantly you will be passionate about art and design and want to find out more about the courses and careers involved.

How will I know if I'm eligible?

ACES works with priority schools within your region – your art teacher will have more details on which schools are included. If you're not a student at one of these schools, don't worry, as you may still be eligible to be involved. If you'd like to check your eligibility, please contact your local 'ACES' project officer.

University of Edinburgh and ECA

Edinburgh College of Art will co-ordinate the ACES programme for Edinburgh and the Lothians, providing educational activities and targeted support for young people from the target groups mentioned within this leaflet.

What activities are involved?

Everyone's artistic interests are individual to them so we'll ask you to indicate these subject interests when you complete an ACES registration form. We cover a broad range of activities within the project including:

- practical and digital portfolio workshops
- careers and study events
- campus orientation visits
- individual advice and guidance
- gallery visits
- online support and information
- summer classes

Want to register?

Your art teacher can provide registration forms and has details of priority schools. You can also download a form here:

If you have any questions about the project or eligibility please email your ACES project officer at: aces@ed.ac.uk
