

Mark Patrizio

Mark is currently a Laboratory Manager in the Centre for Discovery Brain Sciences within the College of Medicine & Veterinary Medicine's Deanery of Biomedical Sciences, covering facilities in the Hugh Robson Building (HRB) and 1 George Square.

Having worked in the University of Edinburgh since 1978, Mark started his career as a Grade 1 Trainee Technician in the Department of Veterinary Anatomy. He then moved to the University of Glasgow's Medical School for two years before coming back to the University of Edinburgh's Department of Anatomy in 1990. There he was involved in the teaching of students in the popular BSc Honours Anatomy course, and when this course ceased, progressed into the research laboratories within the Medical School. These research facilities amalgamated in 1999 and moved to their present location in the HRB.

He is the current Chair of the University of Edinburgh branch of Unite, the Convenor of the Joint Unions Liaison Committee, a Health & Safety representative and a member of the Scottish Education Regional Industrial Sector Committee. In his Union role, he was involved with the mergers of the Moray House Institute of Education and Edinburgh College of Art with the University of Edinburgh, pay modernisation and various policy and grade profile/structure working groups. He is currently a member of the Technician Steering Committee, the Staff Experience Committee and co-chair of the Combined Joint Consultative and Negotiating Committee.
