

Kathryn Nash

Kathryn is a Chancellor's Fellow at the University of Edinburgh Law School. She completed her PhD in politics and international studies at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS) in London. Her research focuses on norms, the role of regional organisations in the international community, and peace and security issues. Kathryn has served on both School and College level committees, including the Research Cultures Working Group and the Concordat Implementation Group. She is active in the UCU Edinburgh branch committee and early career networks, and she is particularly interested in initiatives to address casualisation and ensure wider representation on committees and working groups at all levels of the University.

Prior to beginning her PhD, Kathryn worked for the U.S. Department of State. She has a Master's degree in conflict resolution from Georgetown University and a Bachelor's degree from the George Washington University in international relations.
